

You know how, when you buy a movie for viewing at home, it might come with deleted scenes, concept art galleries, and other bonus content?

That's what Tales of the RED+ is, but for TTRPGs. We've grabbed content we had to cut from Tales of the RED: Street Stories for space reasons as well as a few other goodies, like screamsheets, full-sized maps, and NPC tokens, and stuffed them into this PDF for you to download and use at your table. For those of you rocking a virtual table, there's also a ZIP file packed with JPGs and PNGs to upload and use on your VTT of choice.

If you bought Tales of the RED: Street Stories, thank you! And if you didn't, we hope this concept can still be useful. Until next month, stay safe on The Street.

By the way, players, please be aware there might be some spoilers for the missions in Tales of the RED: Street Stories in this document.

MORE VENDORS AT THE RC NIGHT MARKET

Melissa Wong loves making lists to populate Night City with strange and wonderful new people, places, and things. In Haven't Got a Stitch to Wear, she populated the RC Night Market with twenty different and unusual vendors your Crew could encounter. Sadly, for space reasons, we had to drop a few of the vendors from Tales of the RED: Street Stories.

Fear not, though. For those of you looking for more shopping pop in your Night Market, here's a few more possibilities to add to your list.

▶ MORE VENDORS AT THE RC NIGHT MARKET

1d6	Vendor
1	Anh and Long , Vietnamese-American vendors who run a pho stand. Slip them 10eb and they'll let you peruse a selection of polymer-one-shots. If the Crew succeeds, they'll wave the "entrance fee" for life.
2	The Five Fathom Crew sell salvage retrieved from beneath Night City's waters. They don't have anything that the Edgerunners couldn't find elsewhere, but they will loan the Crew dive gear (dry suits, flippers, diving helmets, and diving rebreathers) for a single job. For more information on the dive gear SEE TOTR:SS PAGE 57 .
3	Beni's Discount Bentos , run by the aforementioned Beni, a Japanese-American woman in a red newsboy cap. She has a crew of dumpster divers and bribes the staff at various Oasis Markets to grab slightly-expired Prepak lunches from the shelves and resell them at street rates. Helping Beni gives one of the Crew a selection of free meals, allowing them to cut their Lifestyle payment by 100eb.
4	Emengarde's Escorts is an escort company specializing in attractive companionship for sexual and non-sexual encounters. She'll give them a choice tidbit of gossip that serves as a one-time +5 bonus to any Check made to get the dirt on a Corporate Exec.
5	Madame Mimeux's is an oddity in Night City— a vendor selling old, out-of-copyright movies on copied chips. Madame Mimeux is also, however, one of Night City's best forgers, using her business as a front to justify her clandestine deliveries. As a reward she will forge a single use identification document for one Edgerunner.
6	Carl's Car Rentals is run by Carl Hudson, a former drag racer of some repute. If the Edgerunners help him sort out parts delivery, he will give them a free rental. This means the Edgerunner will have access to a Compact Groundcar for a week, but are also on the hook for damages and repairs, if any should occur during their use of the vehicle.

UPGRADED MEGABITE

The Lost Kids would rather run than fight, so there's not much of a chance of them seeing combat in Bathed in Red. Still, we know GMs might want to use the nasty, upgraded cyberware package against their Crew on another occasion so here are the rules for how the blood sucking function works.

The upgraded Megabite installed in the Lost Kids has a special function in combat: a suction pump. The kids won't use this unless they have no choice, but it functions like the Choke Action. First, the attacker uses the Grab Action to grapple their target. Then they can use an Action (no Check needed) in subsequent Rounds to bite into the neck and drain blood, doing their BODY STAT directly to the target's HP, ignoring armor. Unlike Choke, this attack is fully lethal. The process is extremely messy.

Addiswood Directors Coming to Night City

by Ziggy 'Front' Page

Famous Addiswood directors Teresa and Fanta Senait arrived last night in Night City to prepare for what might be a month or so of location-based shooting. Their current period project The Parisian Hostess features a script written by Ziggurat power-player Akira Sato, and involves a star-studded cast that includes dented heartthrob Etan Sim and up-and-coming leading lady Mael Cartaret.

The supporting cast includes vid-sim luminaries such as Shingo Hamasaki, Reona Kuroyama-Marshall, Faye Woo, Morgane Sonnentag, and Night City native Reid Govea.

The Parisian Hostess is set in the early days of Arasaka's ascendancy in Night City, and while the Senait Sisters have remained fairly close-lipped about the plot of their script, some juicy leaks indicate that this is going to be an action-packed romance about a Solo falling in love with an indentured hostess in a Yakuza-owned Victorian-themed hotel.

Aspiring actors should be on the lookout for casting calls as the Senait sisters seek to pack their scenes with authentic Night City flavor.

Etan Sim a Free Man!

by Jericho Hunt

Actor Etan Sim is finally free of his tempestuous marriage to now ex-husband Darrel Marchant. The two filed for divorce recently, citing irreconcilable differences after Sim's much-publicized fling with then-costar Gwen Beaufort, on the set of Hearts of Chrome. Rumors first exploded about the affair just before the debut of Hearts of Chrome and led to a bidding war on Etan Sims-related merchandise.

"The next few months are going to be filled with reflection and meditation," Sim said on the way out of the Glen courthouse. "Largely on how I failed Darrel, and our marriage vows. I'm not proud of myself right now."

Darrel Marchant, on the other hand, waved this reporter's questions off with a frosty "No comment."

Marchant is no stranger to the media either, having once starred in Net54's reality series In The Line of Fire, where competing crews of Edgerunners seek to overcome handpicked teams of bodyguards to "assassinate" a VIP. Marchant's team were the Season 3 victors, beating out twelve teams of Edgerunners to see their simulated VIP safe and unharmed despite creative assassinations that included polonium-laced beverages, mono-wire strung swimming pools, and a sabotaged Mister Studd implant.

Continental Brands Cops to Spill

by J.E. Munroe

Continental Brands today acknowledged earlier reports from the Night City Water Authority that a sudden outflow of industrial microbiota overflowed South Night City's Wastewater Treatment Plant and pushed a flow of untreated waste into the city storm drains.

Speaking online, company representatives said that the microbes are designed to bind to toxins in nutrient baths and are "food-grade components that pose no risk to those exposed," but that they may cause concentrated pockets of collected toxins if they accumulate in a location that resembles their intended environment.

Residents are warned to avoid areas of standing, brackish water until the city can trace the flow and clean up the residue.

Residents Return to Traskside Apartments

by Jericho Hunt

Traskside Apartments, badly damaged when the land underneath it suddenly subsided four months ago, has reopened. There was concern that the whole block would have to be re-zoned or even permanently cordoned off after surveys suggested that voids had opened in the fill materials beneath it.

The loss of many civil project records in the DataKrash heavily complicated Night City's reconstruction, with unexpected instabilities or structural failures going undiscovered until well into or even after construction. Fortunately, engineers were able to stabilize the area by injecting stabilizers through deep boreholes.

Many former residents have moved on to new homes, but enough holdouts have returned to throw an impressive block party, with Spin Khalid and Dee Dee providing music.

City engineers remind residents in the newer parts of New Westbrook, Little Europe, and South Night City to report unusual foundation cracking, settling, or shaking.

Wedding Blitz Causes Problems

by Jericho Hunt

An unexpected upswing in matrimonials has left Night City's tailors and houses of worship scrambling to keep up with increased demand. "We have seen a thousand more weddings this year than we would in a normal year," says Shears, a tailor at the Night City institution Torrell and Chiang, "and it's only September. We've run out of off-the-rack tuxedos and navy-colored suits, and most of us working the bespoke end have been pulling 20 hours of overtime per week to try to meet demand. Something is eventually going to have to give, and our clients are not the kind of people who will."

Father Stephen Ly of the Diocese of Night City approves this uptick in weddings, however. "It cheers my heart to see more young people entering into holy matrimony instead of living in sin. However, I will agree that the demand is forcing a change in Church procedure, as I myself have had to leave one set of nuptials shortly after officiating it, to solemnize yet another union."

Apprentice Tailors Wanted

by Torrell and Chiang

Good with a sewing machine? Skilled with alterations? Perhaps you might consider a career as an apprentice tailor with Torrell and Chiang, tailors of bespoke and custom suits. Now offering a 500eb signing bonus and an additional eb per hour for night shifts!

Prospective applicants must have a basic understanding of sewing, both by hand and using a sewing machine. They must be open to learning and expanding their tailoring skill set.

As an apprentice, they will be trained to perform the alterations required by our many customers, and will learn to become proficient at using industrial sewing machines, blind hem machines, sergers, and steam presses.

They will also learn to work with our in-house marking and pinning system, and learn to log alterations performed on our ticket system. If the above all sound like things you can do, drop off a digital copy of your resume at our Garden Patch.

Deliveries Grind to a Halt

by Ziggy "Front" Page

Several Night Markets and street businesses have suffered a temporary supply-side shortage as deliveries by Fixie's Couriers have been halted. This stoppage began at 3:24 this morning, after gunfire was heard issuing from their warehouse and logistics center in the Haywood Industrial Zone.

At the time of publication, Fixie, the couriers' leader, was not answering calls to her Agent, and most of the couriers have declined to comment on their current work stoppage. Anonymous sources suggest that this is yet another hostile takeover on the streets of Night City, following Revere Shipping's acquisition of Two Choombs and A Truck Logistics last May. If that is the case, then one should expect deliveries to resume within the week — hardly good news for anyone who has sent something perishable via their services.

New Hotspot Plagued by Rats?

by Jackie McGee

Free admission. Personalized concerts. Any flavor kinks. Delirium promises the ultimate virtual reality experience and, for many, delivers customized entertainment night after night. Funded by Night Corp, Delirium has been drawing crowds ever since it opened three months ago. Its patrons have become enamored with the club's menu of services delivered through virtuality headsets. When worn, patrons interact with other headset wearers to dance until they're deliriously happy, shrouded in personalized sound, shape, and color schemes called "enviros".

Got a thing for splatterpunk? Riot Grrrl? Or glam-punk? If you can name a subgenre of punk, Delirium probably has it on their menu. What's more: The first enviro of the night is always free for the legal drinking age crowd.

Between its impressive music archive and its zero-tolerance bar fight policy, patrons claim Delirium is almost perfect — except for the rats.

Located in Little Europe, rumors have been swirling that Delirium is a haven for street kids who need a safe place to chill. Though no incidents have been reported, a few influencers are ditching Delirium for the time being. "Somebody's gotta hire an exterminator for them rats, yo," quipped Blue Dawg. "You let everybody in? Only a matter of time before somebody bleeds, and it not gonna be me."

Cactus Water Boss in Thorny Situation

by Jericho Hunt

Lilah Deckard, founder and CEO of Cactus Water Inc, announced yesterday that the company earned record profits. Lilah credits her company's success to the grassroots movement to drink Cactus Water, her company's flagship product, instead of her competitors'.

Founded just two years ago, Cactus Water's popularity skyrocketed among naturalists and technophobes when Rockerboy darlings the Digital Devas were spotted drinking from emerald-green bottles on stage. Since then, the water has developed a cult following among fitness enthusiasts and clean-living advocates.

Not all feedback has been positive, however. According to an anonymous source at Trauma Team, several patients were admitted with severe nausea, headaches, and kidney failure.

When confronted with this news, Lilah Deckard confessed she was aware of the reports but was quick to point fingers at Continental Brands, who recently came out with their own brand of homeopathic water.

"We believe our competitors to be engaged in a vicious war of bottle switching and we will pursue this case with both legal and extralegal strategies as needed."

Suck it Up! The Dead Don't Care!

by Dee^3

The headline says it all, doesn't it? Look, it's true that Night City police have their hands full. It's also true the Lawmen can't possibly hunt, interrogate, and capture every citizen they suspect of thieving — they'd never solve any murders, investigate corruption, or finish patrolling half our neighborhoods. Of course, I understand! You're reeling from the news your son/wife/grandparent/cousin/sister's dog was flatlined. The last thing you want to hear is that all their worldly possessions are missing, too.

Hard truth: You should be worrying about the living. Ever think of who might need dead grandma's grocery money? You think the occasional corpse is a bonanza for thieves, but you know who I'm talking about: Those teenage street "rats" you keep ignoring and don't want tax dollars to help. Rummaging through a corpse's pockets is not an easy job. Think about how desperate you'd have to be.

Stripping them of their clothes? Their gear for some Ripperdoc? Imagine being on "the line", trying to survive, night after night, and you find a corpse. Thank God. Now you can eat. It wasn't like that Lawman was gonna share their doughnut.

So suck it up, citizens. You want the police to keep you safe? Okay. I can get behind that. But the dead? Honey, they really don't care anymore, and maybe you shouldn't either.

New ConApts Cater to NeoLuddites

by J.E. Munroe

Sandwiched between the offices of Pursuit Security Incorporated and Mister Rice Guy, a new eight-story brick building stands in defiance of the modern age. The Pleasant Valley Apartments promotes features only naturalists and NeoLuddites would love.

For starters, the building is powered by its own 20th-century generator. Even its security measures are old school: Residents can sign up for self-defense classes or pay a monthly fee to utilize the complex's private guards.

Despite several nature-based amenities and street-level storefronts, including a pond filled with koi, an aviary on the top floor, and a juice bar, the locals wonder how profitable it will be. Does Night City have enough health nuts, fundamentalists, and hipsters to fill an entire building? Only time will tell.

Rocklin Augmentics Announces New Direction for RockXotics

by Angie Wu 3.0

Rocklin Augmentics has issued a statement declaring that they are redesigning the first product in their new RockXotics cyberware package line, the vampire-themed Megabite.

Marketing representative Alice Chan said: "We have decided to sunset Megabite and have spent resources engineering its successor, Fangtastik. Watch for Fangtastik to hit the streets sometime next year."

Ms. Chan did not give a reason for the redesign, only stating they felt "the product could be a hundred times more extreme an experience for the user".

Rival Biotechnica issued a statement, stating "the exotic market is a tough one. We wish Rocklin luck. They'll need it."

NPC TOKENS

Whether you're playing at a physical table or a digital one, tokens can help you keep track of the action. To help, we've created a token for each NPC who has a portrait in Tales of the RED: Street Stories. Of course, many of them aren't likely to show up in a combat scenario but you're free to use them to represent different NPCs in other missions as well.
